Diwali in Dholakpur : Co-read the story

It was the day before Diwali. All the kids were sitting on the grass listening to the story of Diwali, from the epic, Ramayana.

When the story ended, all the kids ran around to clean the village and their houses. Professor Dhoomketu, a scientist had built a cleaning robot, which moved around the village, helping the children clean. When they had finished cleaning, the kids went to the cow shed to feed and bathe the cows. After that, Maharaja Indravarma distributed toys to the children.

The whole village was looking clean. Now, it was time to decorate the village. The children ran to the market. Chhutki got colors to make rangolis, Bheem got diyas, Raju got wall hangings, while Kalia got Professor Dhoomketu's special environment friendly firecrackers, Dholu-Bholu got matchsticks and Jaggu brought candles. At night, when the diyas were lit, the whole of Dholakpur shone brightly.

All the children got out their environment friendly firecrackers and burst them. The whole sky was lit up. When Dholu-Bholu burst a rocket, it flew straight through Kalia's pants and lit them on fire. Everyone was shocked!

Bheem quickly ran to his house and brought out a bucket filled with water and threw the water on Kalia. When the fire was put out, Chhutki scolded Dholu-Bholu, "Dholu-Bholu, bursting crackers is fun, but if it is not burst with caution, they can be very dangerous." Dholu-Bholu understood.

After that everyone went to the palace to see the special firecrackers show. Everyone shouted, "Happy Diwali!" Everyone was happy.
